The Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) announced the capture of several villages on Wednesday after several days of fighting, and urged the UN Security Council to put pressure on the Islamic State to end the fighting. The SDF are supported by US-led coalition warplanes and special forces, and their advance to the Islamic State stronghold on the northern bank of the Euphrates River has cut off the militants from their territory in Raqqa province. "We announce the liberation of the villages of: Sisiba, Birbas, Bir Hassan, Qara Zurayq, Osal Maraj, and Tel Halab," the Kurdish-led forces said. The SDF said the remaining villages in the area were "under the control of IS". The advances came as US-led coalition warplanes continued attacks on Islamic State positions in Raqqa. Several estimates have put the number of Islamic State fighters in the besieged Syrian city at between 2,000 and 3,000, with several hundred of them being foreign jihadists who came to Syria to fight. The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the SDF had surrounded the remaining IS-held villages in the province on Tuesday and broke through the Islamic State defences in Bir Hassan. The SDF advance on Raqqa has forced some of the jihadists to launch counter-attacks. Last month, the group destroyed a number of US-made Humvees and a Pentagon armoured vehicle in the SDF's first major offensive
